

George Chapman

George Chapman is Managing Director of the Kentucky Integra Realty Resources Louisville office with coverage for Kentucky and a co-owner of the Nashville office of Integra. The Kentucky state wide office is based in Louisville and provides a full range of real estate services excluding sales. The corporate Integra office is located in New York and oversees 56 offices in the US, located in all major cities, with annual gross billable of $110,000,000. The Louisville and Nashville offices have over 20 employees and have been in business since 1971.

George has been involved in some projects you may be familiar with such as Rupp Arena and Convention Center, Humana Data Processing Center, 1990's expansion of the Louisville International Airport, Toyota of Georgetown, KY, U of K administration building reconstruction, KCTCS expansion, the U of L Campus and Medical School expansion and the new Louisville Arena.

George speaks on the latest economic and real estate issues in Louisville and the region. Integra of Kentucky, for two decades, annually presents a U of L economic seminar that provides guidance for lenders, developers, lawyers, engineers and public officials on the current years economic and real estate forecast. George is a member of the Appraisal Institute, the Counselors of Real Estate and is a Fellow of the Royal Institute of Charter Surveyors.

George has served as president of the two major appraisal professional boards as state president. At a national level George served as Area Vice President, numerous committee chairs and has been a committee member for 25 years. He has served on ethics panels on state and national levels attempting to raise appraisal standards and quality throughout the industry. He resides in Louisville and has been married to Janette Brown of Stanford, Kentucky for 36 years. The Chapman,s have one daughter, Laura Chapman.