Next Week's Speaker...

Ben Brown and Allison Depenbrock for Team River Runner

Team River Runner is a 501c3 non-profit organization that was started 6 years ago by a group of kayakers in the Washington, DC area. These individuals, chaired by the now executive director, Joe Mornini, started to notice the influx of injured soldiers coming to Walter Reed Army Medical Center for treatment and rehabilitation of a variety of injuries suffered while serving our country. Joe and his colleagues began to think. From their years of boating experience they realized that one does not necessarily have to have the use of their legs to operate a kayak. Nor do they necessarily have to have both arms, or the ability to see. It is with this "vision", determination, and the ability to modify kayaks and paddles to meet the needs of different types of disabilities that Team River Runner has the capability to put any individual on the water so they can enjoy the experiences of recreational boating. Over the past six years, Team River Runner has grown from a single entity operating out of the rehabilitation pool at Walter Reed Army Medical Center to more than 25 satellite chapters across the United States. This organization has touched the lives of thousands of disabled veterans and their families and continues to grow every week.

On April 30 there will be the second annual Derby Eve Gala at the History Center from 7-10 PM. There are also fun summer concerts sponsored by DFI. There will be events planned for the Riverfront Development when it is completed. She recently attended a Creative Cities event in Lexington, which featured many highly-regarded speakers who spoke about diversity and how we can welcome everyone to our community. She stated that the new trolley is getting to be a big success and all you have to do to ride on it is to wave her hand and it will pick you up for the 40-minute trip.
