Next Week's Program...

Sylvia Lovely jokes about being born in city hall – but she's only half kidding. The hospital in the Appalachian hills of Kentucky where she was born was later transformed into the city hall of Frenchburg, her hometown. The symbolism fits. Sylvia is executive director and CEO of the Kentucky League of Cities and president of the NewCities Institute.

Recognized as a champion of cities and the power of people to create positive change, Sylvia has appeared on CNN's "Lou Dobbs Tonight," CNBC's "Power Lunch" and ABC radio. Her opinion columns have appeared in the Miami Herald, Indianapolis Star and Cincinnati Enquirer.

Lovely is a 1988 graduate of Morehead State University and the University of Kentucky College of Law. She and her husband Bernie have two grown sons and live in Lexington, Kentucky.

This Week's Speaker...

The speaker for the day was Susan Rademacher, President of the Louisville Olmstead Parks Conservancy and Assistant Director of Metro Parks. She spoke about the relationship between these organizations in Louisville and how she is helping to preserve the Olmsted Park systems. Frederick Olmsted was a social reformer before he became a landscape architect, and wanted to develop a system of parks where people could refresh themselves mentally and physically. He made his first trip to Kentucky in 1853 and he found Kentucky to have the most beautiful landscape he had ever seen. Kentucky established its own park system in 1888 and even had its own police force. Olmsted and Louisville developed a system of 52 parks and, when seen from the air, Louisville indeed has a green landscape. The three major parks developed by Olmsted were Cherokee, Shawnee and Iroquois. There are also parkways in Louisville, the most notable being Southern. She oversees tree preservation along 15 miles of parkways. There are also numerous bike trails and there is a tree replacement program. First, Shawnee Park has scenic vistas along the Ohio River and the parks department replants trees along the riverbank. The park had a strong sports purpose with numerous baseball fields in the 1920s. There has been a sports complex developed at Shawnee Park and the Great Lawn has been restored. A beautiful pavilion has been restored with a new playground on the edge of the Great Lawn. Second, Iroquois Park consists of some 700 acres, compared with 300 acres for Shawnee Park. All the parks are outside the city limits but these parks do spur private development. Iroquois is a rare urban island ecosystem with lookout points. Wetlands have also been restored which, using natural techniques, has prevented flooding of basements in the homes below the park. The park has bridle and hiking trails, and a 1938 WPA amphitheater has been restored. Third, Cherokee Park is Olmsted's greatest work of scenic design. One can immerse oneself in the scenery in an area through which runs Beargrass Creek. In 1974, tornadoes destroyed 80% of the trees, and this resulted in a huge invasion of exotic plants. The Park is in the process of being restored and recreated. There is also a system of some 18 neighborhood parks in which you can restore and refresh yourself. In honor of Susan's talk, a book titled "Ecotourism in Appalachia" was donated to the library at Western Hills High School.

This Week's Speaker...

The speaker for the day was Sylvia Lovely, Executive Director of the Kentucky League of Cities. The League represents 370 cities and publishes City Magazine. The League also puts out a member publication called KOC Direct. Sylvia founded the "New Cities Institute" in which is discussed disillusionment of so many cities because of the loss of their young people. Originally, Sylvia was a lobbyist, but now is engaged in community building. She cited examples where citizens can make a difference in their communities, in spite of the population being more mobile today. There is much disillusionment today and a malaise with people wanting change. One cause of disillusionment in cities is the pension crisis, and the fiscal distress resulting from it. While most cities will not be destroyed by natural disasters such as Katrina, apathy will destroy a city just as readily. However, she painted a picture of hope since all is not gloom and doom. She outlined things one can do on a local level such as work at home and proceed outward, stay informed, have good intentions, and exert leadership. We all need to take more responsibility at the local level by adhering to the "Four 'P's": (1) Perspective as we care about the issues. (2) Place and our connection to it. (3) People, who are a natural resource (4) Partnership for prosperity. The most important thing to focus on is education. We must follow through with these steps and hold ourselves accountable. Another key ingredient here is leadership. Democracy is important, messy as it is. Humility is very important in exercising leadership, and caring is important to the dignity of the people. In honor of Sylvia's talk today, the book titled Watchdogs of Democracy by Helen Thomas was donated to Ashwood Place.

Visit to Dominican Republic

Want to visit the Dominican Republic and a Rotary International Project Site? Several members of the Frankfort Rotary Club plan to participate in a delegation from Frankfort in a visit with our counterparts in the Rotary Club of San Pedro de Macoris and to visit the potable well project sites. The Frankfort Rotary Club, along with five other Clubs in Area 7, have sponsored several potable water projects in San Pedro de Macoris in the Dominican Republic (DR). Some Frankfort Rotarians have mentioned that they may wish to be part of a delegation to visit the DR, meet fellow Rotarian counterparts and visit the sites. If you would like to learn more about being part of this delegation, please call Bill Miller at 223-0512 or e-mail him at millerkyun@aol.com. Bill will be in the DR two times early next year: January 5-12, 2007 and February 13-18, 2007. You can go for a shorter or longer time period, whichever you prefer. Did I mention that it will be a blue sky, 85 degrees and sunny? Please give Bill a call if you want more information. Since that is a peak time for travel to the Caribbean and airline seats go quickly, call soon.

Board of Directors Meeting

The next Board of Directors monthly meeting will be Nov. 20 at 5:30 p.m. at the Frankfort Plant Board Office, 317 West Second Street.

This Week's Speaker...

The speaker for the day was Florence S. Huffman, editor-in-chief of Clark Publishing Company. She spoke about her love for Kentucky and how she applies the Rotary Four-Way Test to her work. As a self-described "recovering attorney," she spoke about how she is dedicated to the truth in publishing the facts about Kentucky's rich history and heritage. She spoke about the early settlers in Kentucky and how they overcome tremendous dangers and obstacles in settling this new land. She owes a lot of her knowledge and inspiration to Dr. Thomas Clark, who shared his mind and time with her. She particularly remembered what he said about Kentucky in that this state "gets a hold on you." We need to teach our children to have pride in Kentucky and tell them about the blood, sweat, and tears shed by our forefathers to settle it. At 101 years old, Dr. Clark found the time to share his knowledge with her. He wrote the forward to the Book of Almanac and Facts about Kentucky. The last almanac was published in 1856 and this is the second edition in recent years. This almanac, which contains everything fine and good about this state, is Clark Publishing's gift to Kentucky. The Almanac put out by her company celebrates everyone that made Kentucky what it is today. We must convince our children that Kentucky is as good as it gets and that they need to stay here. The goal is to make our Commonwealth even better than it is, and the Almanac teaches about the greatness of this state. Individually, we can change the world by speaking out against injustice when some persons seek to abuse their power. Finally, she spoke about the first printer and publisher in Kentucky, John Bradford, who in 1788 published the first newspaper and almanac. He told the truth so as to encourage Kentucky to become a state and separate itself from Virginia.

Next Week's Program...

Dave Adkisson, President & CEO of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce, returned to Kentucky in February of 2005 after spending six years as president of the Birmingham Regional Chamber of Commerce, Alabama.

A graduate of Georgetown College, Adkisson earned a masters degree in ethics from Harvard University in 1975. He began his career with the Owensboro Chamber of Commerce, Kentucky, first as project manager and then as the executive vice president.

At age 34, Adkisson was elected mayor of Owensboro and re-elected four years later. During his administration, he led the effort to revitalize Owensboro's downtown, created a performing arts complex, developed the MidAmerica Industrial Airpark, recruited several new industries, expanded the city's parks and bikeways and developed a new bridge linking Kentucky and Indiana across the Ohio River. During his 20 years of service in Kentucky, Adkisson held several statewide leadership posts including chairman of the Kentucky Advocates for Higher Education, president of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce Executives (KCCE), co-founder of Leadership Kentucky and chairman of the Kentucky Center for Public Issues.

As a strong proponent of business interests, Adkisson is spending much of his time meeting with business and government leaders across the commonwealth. He has also spearheaded a new strategic plan for the Chamber that reaffirms the Chamber's mission to ensure Kentucky maintains a business-friendly climate. Adkisson currently sits on the boards of the Kentucky World Trade Center, United Way of Kentucky and American Chamber of Commerce Executives and is a part of the steering committee for the Partners for Kentucky's Future. He resides in Lexington with his wife Bonnie.

This Week's Speaker...

The speaker for the joint meeting of the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs was Russ Colwell, Chair of Public Relations and Board member of the March of Dimes of Greater Kentucky. Mr. Colwell has been a March of Dimes volunteer for 22 years, following his brother's loss of three children, including two who were born prematurely. Founded by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1938, the March of Dimes' original purpose was to collect dimes to combat polio. Once that effort was successful in the US, the March of Dimes turned its attention to birth defects. Mr. Colwell focused on the March of Dimes' programs to prevent and respond to premature births. In the US, nearly 13% of all births are premature. In Kentucky, 14% of all births are premature, a 24% increase between 1993 and 2003. In 2003, the cost of hospital charges due to pre-term births was $18.1 billion, nearly half of all hospital charges. The direct cost to health plan-providing employers for one premature birth is $41,610, fifteen times the cost of one healthy, full-term baby. Efforts to prevent and treat pre-term births have experienced a tremendous boost over the past few years. The KY General Assembly expanded new-birth screenings for conditions that could result in developmental problems. More recently, a three-year grant to KY hospitals and other health organizations by the Johnson & Johnson Health Group will support neonatal intensive care, track premature births, and provide family support and education. The March of Dimes wants to get preventive health education out into communities so prospective parents will understand the impact of smoking, drug and alcohol use, high blood pressure, obesity, and even poor dental care on the incidence of pre-term births. For more information about the March of Dimes and pre-term birth prevention/response activities, contact Amy Block, Community Director, March of Dimes (toll free) 866-898-4088 or by email: ablock@marchofdimes.com.

This Week's Program...

The speaker for the day was Dave Adkisson, CEO and President of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce. He is past mayor of Owensboro. Calling himself a "recovering politician" he spoke about the various activities in which the state Chamber is involved. It is located on Chenault Road near Democratic Headquarters, and has a staff of 30 people. The state Chamber has about 2,000 members, ranging from large corporations like UPS to small hardware stores. The state Chamber has a partnership with local chambers, through which 25,000-30,000 businesses are reached. It has five registered lobbyists. Major initiatives include having a full-time director to work with local chambers. The state Chamber is involved heavily in education to make Kentucky more competitive in the next generation. We must have a more educated work force and the Chamber is working hard in the areas of education reform and higher education. One way in which the Chamber is a supportive voice for education is to successfully advocate for two additional days in the school calendar, in addition to working for more teachers' pay. The goal is to increase the school calendar by 10 additional days. There needs to be more funding for pre-school and technology. Over the next 5-10 years, 50% of the Chamber's energies will focus on education, and the other 50% on competitive issues such as the environment and taxes. The Chamber is also lobbying for tax relief for small businesses. The Chamber has successfully lobbied for corporate tax decreases. As for the future, Kentucky is changing demographically, with a larger Hispanic population and aging of the boomers. The industrial make-up of Kentucky is changing. For example, UPS in Louisville alone employs more persons than the entire coal mining industry in Kentucky. Other changes are that tobacco warehouses are being bulldozed, taxes are being increased on tobacco, and many smoking ordinances are being introduced in communities across the state. The state must be willing to change to remain competitive. In responding to questions from the floor, he stated that the arts are important to the economic life of the community. The arts create a climate where people want to live and raise their kids. We lose economically if we do not promote the arts, which are an important part of economic development. People are drawn to areas where there is a higher quality of life. Concerning an increase of the minimum wage, the membership of the Chamber is split on the question, but the policy of the Chamber is to resist government mandates. He expects this issue to play out on the federal level. Although the public supports an increase in the minimum wage by 4:1, philosophically the Chamber is opposed to governmental intervention. Thank you Barry K. Holder, Jr. for a great month of programs for November.

Dave Adkisson, President and CEO of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce, and November program chair Barry K Holder, Jr.
