Derrick K. Ramsey
Deputy Secretary,
Commerce Cabinet

The leadership qualities that served Derrick Ramsey so well in college and professional football are still obvious today. The field is different, but Ramsey still is very much a quarterback. As Deputy Secretary of the Kentucky Commerce Cabinet, it's up to Ramsey to help draw up the game plan, get 16 different agencies to perform as a cohesive team, and achieve victories for the taxpayers of Kentucky in everything from the Department of Parks to the Kentucky Arts Council to the Division of Fish and Wildlife.

Ramsey won the starting quarterback job for the University of Kentucky in 1976, his junior season, and led the Cats to a 9-3 record. Nobody really expected Ramsey's senior team to be much better. But they were, in a big way. That team was, arguably, the best Wildcat squad between the end of Paul "Bear" Bryant's UK coaching career in 1953 and the present.

Ramsey led the offense, and All-American Art Still, who came from the same Camden, N.J., high school that produced Ramsey, anchored one of the greatest defenses in UK history.

After being drafted by the Oakland Raiders, he was moved to tight end, where he proved to be as adept at catching the ball as he was throwing it for the Wildcats. In 1984, he was selected to the all-star team for the American Conference. He also played in Super Bowl XV with the Raiders and Super Bowl XX with the New England Patriots. Oakland teammates such as Ray Chester, Fred Biletnikoff, Art Shell, and Gene Upshaw admired Ramsey for his unselfishness and consistency.

Armed with a 1983 Bachelor of Arts degree from UK, Ramsey was ready for life after football. He plunged into athletics administration, and, after working for several years at his alma mater, he was named Athletics Director at Kentucky State University in 1999. Under his leadership, the Thorobreds were consistent contenders for SIAC conference, regional, and national championships in football, men's and women's basketball, softball, and golf.

In addition to building championship teams, Ramsey also presided over the opening of a new athletics center and weight room, facilities that were necessary for KSU to recruit top student-athletes. But Ramsey is most proud of the fact that, during his 4 1/2-year stewardship of the athletics program, the grade-point average of student athletes rose from an average of 2.4 to 2.8. Along with that, the athletics department produced more full and part Presidential Scholarship recipients than any other department on campus.

Board Action

The board has approved two new members Susan Barber and James Hale contingent upon no negative response after publication in the newsletter.

This Weeks Speaker...

The speaker for the day was George Ward, Commerce Cabinet Secretary. Ward oversees 16 different agencies that employ 2300 people. The Commerce Cabinet has an annual budget of $215 million, with $115 million in capital projects proposed over the next two years. By combining tourism with the arts the two groups have collaborated in promoting events such as the Folklife Festival, the Civil War commemoration, the Lincoln Bicentennial and many others. In 2008 some one million visitors are expected to come for Lincoln's 200th birthday celebrations. Secretary Ward also spoke about comprehensive economic development in Eastern Kentucky. Examples include mountain biking trails and the fact that Eastern Kentucky has the largest elk herd east of the Rockies. He also addressed the energy bill to be considered by the special session of the legislature and how other states are looking to Kentucky and its incentive package for Peabody Coal. He also mentioned Lake Cumberland, which has been lowered some 43 feet because of structural problems with Wolf Creek Dam. The lowering of the lake has not been all negative, since the lake is cleaner and there is more shoreline where boaters can moor their boats. There are misconceptions in the media that the lake is dry. The governor has appointed an inter-agency task force to deal with issues such as safety, health, and tourism at Lake Cumberland. Over the next five years, there are 14 major sporting events scheduled in Kentucky. One of the events of which we are most proud is the World Equestrian Games set for 2010. Kentucky will gain television exposure all over the world to see these events so that people will now understand that Kentucky stands for more than the Derby, fried chicken and bourbon. This will provide an opportunity to introduce Kentucky especially to Europeans who will find out that this is a great place to visit. The 1% transit room tax has helped immensely. It has doubled the money available to market the state. Thanks to TV advertisement in neighboring states, the tourism business has grown by leaps and bounds and is over a $10 billion industry. He also noted renovations that have been made or are in the works at Lake Barkley, Kentucky Dam Village, and Cumberland Falls State Parks. In honor of Secretary Ward's talk, the book titled "Good To Be Great" has been donated to the library at Franklin County High School.

Next Week's Program...

Susan C. Bush, commissioner of the Department for Natural Resources, leads an agency with oversight responsibilities related to mining, oil and gas, forestry, land preservation and conservation. She was cited for her strong support of conservation districts, which has included advocacy of their programs with the General Assembly and Kentucky's congressional delegation.

Bush, a geologist, began her career with the former Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet in 1980. For the next nine years, she worked as the director in the Division of Permits for the Department for Surface Mining. She spent two additional years as director of the cabinet's Division of Waste Management.

In 1991, Bush joined Commonwealth Technology Inc., a private environmental consulting firm where her responsibilities included clean up of contaminated sites, groundwater studies and environmental assessments. In 2001, Bush joined Third Rock Consultants, a private environmental consulting group in Lexington. As project manager, Bush focused on stream assessment and restoration and environmental studies related to transportation projects.

Bush practices what she preaches, personally as well as professionally. She and her husband own a farm on the Kentucky River, which she considers her sanctuary. They relax by canoeing, kayaking and sometimes just floating on the river. Bush spends other leisure hours gardening. Her knowledge of natural resources, her experience with environmental projects and her passion for the wise use of our natural resources have garnered respect from both private and governmental leaders.

This Week's Speaker...

The speaker for the day was Derrick Ramsey, Deputy Secretary for the Commerce Cabinet and former quarterback for the U.K. football team in the mid-1970s. In his position he oversees the Sports Authority, whose mission is to bring sporting events to Kentucky for the purposes of creating jobs and to have a positive economic impact on the Commonwealth. Examples of sports being brought to this state include Rolex, Iron-Man Contest, the Ryder Cup, and the World Equestrian Games. He went to Bahrain and helped bring back the Equestrian Games for 2010, which promises to be the biggest sporting event in the country with over one-half million visitors expected and with over a $300 million economic impact. Under the auspices of the Kentucky Sports Authority is Team Kentucky, which stretches from Paducah to Ashland. He is also negotiating to bring the Great Outdoor Games here, which consists of such events as log-rolling and tree-climbing. He also spoke about Cherokee Park in Marshall County, established in 1953 as an all-black facility. When the state parks were integrated in 1964, Cherokee Park fell into disrepair. He is in the process of attempting to restore the park as part of Kentucky history. In honor of Derrick's talk, the book titled "Quiet Strength" was donated to Elkhorn Middle School.

Laura Owen, Secretary of the Education and Humanities Cabinet

Laura Emberton Owens has been the secretary of the Education Cabinet. since Sept. 1, 2006. Previously, she served as deputy secretary of the Education Cabinet and commissioner of the Department for Workforce Investment in the cabinet.

Before joining state government, Owens was involved in education, workforce training and local government issues. Owens has been an educator for nearly 25 years. She also served as a freelance communications consultant focusing on leadership training. From 2003 to 2004, she served as an elected city council member in Glasgow until she left to assume her role as commissioner.

Owens is a graduate of Western Kentucky University where she earned bachelors' degrees in English and communication and a master's degree in communication. She has received the high honor of being appointed to a Presidential Commission and serves on The White House Commission on Presidential Scholars.

Governor Ernie Fletcher also appointed Owens to the Education Commission of the States and most recently, the Southern Regional Education Board (SREB).

Secretary Owens and her husband, Donnie, reside in Frankfort. Since July 2004, Donnie has served as the principal at Elkhorn Elementary School. They have a daughter, a son, daughter-in-law, and two young grandchildren.

This Week's Speaker...

The speaker for the day was Susan Bush, Commissioner of Natural Resources. Her department consists of 815 employees - 300 of whom work in Frankfort and the rest in field offices across the state. First, she spoke about the Division of Oil and Gas. Last year, Kentucky produced some 92 million cubic feet of natural gas and 2½ million barrels of oil. There are 28,000 oil wells in this state and 17,000 gas wells, producing $800 million in revenue. Oil was first discovered here in 1860 and the first well produced 500 barrels a day. Kentucky is the third largest coal producer, and her department regulates both the environment and safety. 17,000 persons are employed in the coal industry. 91% of the electricity in Kentucky is generated by coal (which is one reason the electric rates are so low here), compared to 52% for the nation. From 1790 until 1992, 8.3 billion tons of coal have been mined in Kentucky, which has reserves of 88 billion tons. Kentucky has more coal mines than any other state, but 60% of the mining is underground. Commissioner Bush presented a slide show demonstrating how forests are reclaimed from surface mining, and Kentucky is a member of the Appalachian Resource Restoration Commission. Some 40,000 acres have been reforested and returned to wildlife land. Elk herds are returning. Her department also regulates mine safety. Most accidents involve machinery and roof falls. So far this year there have been two mining fatalities and these were both in surface mines. Commissioner Bush also spoke about the Division of Forestry. Kentucky has 11.9 million acres of forest land, and 47% of the land area in Kentucky is forests. Of this, 89% is privately owned. Kentucky is third in the nation in hardwood production and forests have great value. Forestry harvesting brings in $8.7 billion annually and is primarily done by machinery. She also mentioned wild land fires and found that 62% are caused by arson with 1863 wild land fires burning 54,000 acres. In responding to questions from the floor, she stated that her department also regulates sand, gravel, and limestone mining. Only two permits have been issued for mountaintop removal. Kentucky has one of the strongest mine safety programs in the nation. Finally, her department has no position on coal gasification or liquefaction.

Commissioner of Natural Resources and speaker for the day Susan Bush poses with August program chair Henry Curtis.

This Week's Speaker...

The speaker for the day was Laura Emberton Owens, Secretary of the Education Cabinet. She was appointed to this position on September 1, 2006, having previously served as deputy secretary of the Education Cabinet and commissioner for Workforce Investment. She stated that changes going on in education today are making a difference across Kentucky. Education goes hand-in-hand with business, which share common goals. The Education Cabinet also houses Library and Archives, and nine other agencies that have education backgrounds. The goal today is to give all students a world-class preparatory education so as to compete globally. Changes in education are exemplified by the acronym STEM which stands for science, technology, education and mathematics. We simply must promote a stronger academic environment, which must in turn starts at the elementary level. This is done by investing in human capital. Unfortunately we are often dealing with an aging workforce in critical areas. For example, NASA is overwhelmingly elderly, with over half over fifty. Only a very small percentage of the NASA workforce consists of persons under thirty. However, education is everybody's business, and we need to work together and emphasize more vocational education and less "well-educated snobs." We need to work together so that Kentuckians are educated for different pathways in life and Secretary Owens values diversity in education in all that we do with appropriate training in needed skills. For example, it cannot be overemphasized that students need to be encouraged to stay in school. Education is everybody's business because therein lies our future. There is a need to focus on how to make postsecondary education more affordable. In responding to many questions from the floor, she responded as follows: (1) Although still below the national average, ACT scores are improving. (2) Because there are so many academic demands on students and teachers, there is not much time left for physical education. This is most unfortunate considering the degree of obesity among today's youth. (3) 50% of high school graduates must take at least one remedial class in college. For those who would blame the high schools, the question is why the colleges are not sending them better teachers. (4) As far as excellence in various subjects, it can no longer be separated by gender as to who excels in what subject. (5) She acknowledged that students are over-tested and the CATS assessment is overemphasized. Changes need to be made in this area and there needs to be more emphasis in math, science and reading. (6) Adult education opportunities abound for those willing to take advantage of them. (7) Many students benefit from home schooling when the parent has the time and skills to do it but this is often not the case. An equivalency test is required of home schooled students before they enter school.

Guests This Week:

Jeoff Pinkerton was the guest of Bob Bullock; Gary Forman was the guest of Steve Dooley; and Gail Russell was the guest of Holly Harris.

Sept. 5 Weekly Meeting

Please remember that on September 5 the club will be meeting at the new State Transportation Building and not at the Hotel. Parking is available in the first floor of the parking garage on the right side of the building and across the street behind the History Center. There will be our usual registration table in the lobby of the building and directions will be given for lunch and the meeting.

Rotary Leadership Institute

Sessions I and II of the Rotary Leadership Institute will be held in Lexington on October 6. This is great training for those interested in club leadership. The cost is $85 and the club will pay the registration fee for the first 5 members to sign-up. If you are interested in registering for this training and/or need more information, please see president Steve or contact a Board member.

King Center

The King Center is holding a celebration dinner in honor and recognition of its contributors on Thursday August 30 from 6-8 PM. If you are interested in representing the Club at this event, please let president Steve know as soon as possible.

This Week's Speaker...

Gary P. Brunette, Jr., plant leader of Centria Co.'s Frankfort facility, was the speaker. Centria makes architectural metal roofing and siding panels. In 1996, three companies with more than 300 years' combined experience in the industry consolidated to form Centria, which has manufacturing facilities in PA and AR as well as KY. The Frankfort plant is located in US 421S next to the Christian Academy. The Frankfort plant's products are used in a variety of buildings, including, schools, hi-rise offices, government buildings, stadiums, hospitals, and group residences. Local area examples include the roof on Southeast Christian Church in Louisville, a new school in Anderson Co., Monoplast's plant, and Paul Brown Stadium in Cincinnati. The plant also provided products for Olympic Village housing in Utah. Its products are used world-wide, with its international sales being concentrated in the Middle East, the Asian peninsula, China, and the Philippines. Centria's team members are paid by salary, rather than clocking in. Training and education programs allow workers to progress in salary. Centria has a good package of employee benefits including a 401K, a profit sharing plan, a good healthcare program, and a bonus payment system. Employees are allowed six paid-leave days per year in addition to vacation days, and they are paid for unused days at the end of the year. Centria has 90 full-time team members, 265,000 sq.ft. under roof, and five acres of land. It employs from 5-15 temps at a time. The company has a monthly star performer award, monthly cookouts during good weather, an annual family outing, and a golf scramble for employees. Within the community, Centria team members contribute to the Salvation Army food drives and angel tree, the United Way, and Special Olympics. It is represented on the boards of the Chamber of Commerce and Habilitation. It has recently received a community manufacturing award and the Governor's Safety Award. Centria is a privately held company. All of its steel is manufactured in the US. Asked about the benefits and challenges of being in Franklin County, Gary cited Centria's team members' quality and low turnover and the other manufacturers in the area as benefits. He said Frankfort's central location in the US is also a plus. He said that math skills of local high school graduates are the biggest challenge. He estimated that 95% of Centria's employees are from Franklin and surrounding counties and 30-40% are female. The company is fast approaching a 50-50 male/female split on the shop floor. The local team members are non-union, but Centria has unions in other locations. In Gary's honor, the Club is giving the book Basketball Philosophy to the Frankfort Christian Academy library.
