VOL. NO. XLII

ISSUE NO. 6

Next Week's Program...

Dr. Chris Daniel, formerly a Professor of Public Administration at Kentucky State University, will discuss "America's Changing Immigration Landscape." While teaching at Kentucky State University, Political Scientist Christopher Daniel developed expertise concerning ways that immigration affects American communities and institutions. He has taught Master of Public Administration students, including state government professionals, about issues working class Mexican and Central American immigrants experience in Kentucky and also challenges that immigration creates for government agencies and service organizations. Dr. Daniel's presentation will discuss developments that have occurred in recent years that could potentially reshape American political discourse about immigrants and refugees.
