Next Week's Program...

Al Cross is director of the Institute for Rural Journalism and Community Issues, which helps rural news media define the public agenda in their communities and cover broader issues that have local impact. He is an associate extension professor of journalism and the only tenured professor doing extension work at the University of Kentucky outside the College of Agriculture.

Cross helped organize the Institute, which has academic partners at 28 universities in 18 states. He became director in 2004 after more than 26 years as a reporter at The Courier-Journal, the last 15½ as chief political writer. He still writes a political column at least twice a month for the Louisville newspaper and is a commentator on KET's election-night programs.

His awards include the Kentucky Journalism Hall of Fame, the James Madison Award for service to the First Amendment, the 2009 Media Award of the East Kentucky Leadership Foundation and a share of the Pulitzer Prize won by The Courier-Journal's staff in 1989 for coverage of the nation's deadliest bus and drunk-driving crash. He was national president of the Society of Professional Journalists in 2001-02, and holds the Wells Key, SPJ's highest member award. He is a director of SPJ's Sigma Delta Chi Foundation and secretary of the Kentucky Judicial Campaign Conduct Committee.

Cross is a native of Albany and a graduate of Western Kentucky University. He edited and managed weekly newspapers in Monticello, Russellville and Leitchfield before joining The Courier-Journal in 1978, working in bureaus in Somerset and Bardstown before joining The C-J's Frankfort Bureau in 1987. He became political writer in 1989, covering politics from local to presidential elections, including nine national conventions.
