Next Week's Program...

As a beef cattle marketing specialist for the Kentucky Department of Agriculture, Tim Dietrich feels blessed to be in a position to help Kentucky's farm families provide the best care and responsible management for every animal they raise. Tim has been involved with beef cattle from an early age and knows that farmers are committed to doing what's right every day on their farms. After all, they feed their families the same beef consumers enjoy. He knows that providing safe and wholesome food is not just a priority for cattle farmers and ranchers, but is the responsibility of everyone who works at the Department of Agriculture. Tim began raising cattle in 1975 when he showed his first 4-H heifer and continued participating in both 4-H and Future Farmers of America through age 21. He went on to work on cattle ranches in Texas, Mississippi and Missouri, showing cattle at major livestock shows. Tim earned an Associate in Applied Science degree from Ohio State University, and has worked for both
