Next Week's Speaker

Beginning in the labs of Kentucky Space, Twyman Clements, a graduate student at the time, partnered with then-Kentucky Science and Technology Corporation CEO Kris Kimel to understand and simplify the complexities of ISS-based research to become leaders in a new frontier.

Kris Kimel

Founded in 2014 by Clements and Kimel as a commercial spinoff of Kentucky Space and based in the heart of Lexington, Space Tango facilitates research and manufacturing in the microgravity environment from design to implementation expanding opportunities for biomedical and technology applications.

“Our focus is not necessarily the six people in orbit, but the 7 billion people on Earth.”
-CLEMENTS

“At Space Tango, we streamline the process of designing, integrating and operating experiments in microgravity to develop new products that improve life on Earth,” their website says.

“Coupled with our expertise in technology and scientific consulting, we allow our customers to truly focus on their science. Catering to a diverse client base consisting of fortune 500 companies, leading academic universities, research foundations and educational partners, Space Tango has consistently excelled in a providing efficient and cost-effective product development cycles and rapid delivery of configurable systems.

“The microgravity environment is a new frontier for discovery and innovation,” it continues. “Space Tango envisions a future where the next important breakthroughs in healthcare and technology will occur off the planet creating a new global market 250 miles up in low Earth Orbit. We are developing an entire pipeline of products to increase the variety, volume, and accessibility of microgravity. By exploring it with industries of all kinds, we can improve life on Earth and inspire the next generation to continue to expand the horizon of this new frontier.”

Happy Birthday!

Happy Birthday to fellow Rotarians Don Dampier, Fred Deaton, Sallie Lanham, Christine Richards and Jim Richardson, who celebrate their birthday in December.

At right, Dennis VanHorn challenges Rotarians to ring the Salvation Army bell this Saturday, continuing a Frankfort Rotary tradition dating to the 1930s.

Below right, our club was presented an absolutely fantastic program. Former U.S. Congressman, Kentucky Attorney General and Auditor, Ben Chandler delivered the address today. Chandler as CEO and President of the Foundation for a Healthy Kentucky spoke on the state of citizens health in the Commonwealth.
