Next Week's Meeting...

Jason Allen with the Franklin Center for Innovation has extensive experience in both the operations and marketing sides of small businesses, and also has a history of technical innovation, specifically around the use of CNC machines and 3D printers for custom sign-making and prototyping. Allen also has a natural talent for communicating vision, building partnerships, and facilitating structural innovation.

FCFI is a community oriented public workshop where people can meet and work on their projects. We provide a facility that is open 24/7 to monthly members that set up auto-billing. FCFI is a place where you can get messy, be loud, and make whatever comes to your mind. We are open to the public every Tuesday at 6pm.

Our mission is to encourage people to make. We strive to see people discuss and build their dreams. Our goal is to promote STEAM education, open source values, and skill sharing among our members, industry, and the community.

Our community is a diverse collection of makers and teachers of all types. Electronic art enthusiasts, sewers, machinists, engineers, college professors, boy scout troop leaders and on and on. We aim to foster making and innovation in every area imaginable.
